'Biggest Worry is Politics'

Apart from the Big Tech companies, known as the Magnificent Seven, he also spoke about the improving spotlight over India.

"I believe these (Magnificent Seven) may be the greatest companies we've ever seen on," he said, adding that he doesn't have equity exposure to any of them. Since its inception in 1995, Oaktree has expanded beyond its roots in distressed debt and now invests in credit, private equity, real assets and publicly listed equities. In 2019, it sold a 82% controlling stake to Brookfield for $4.7 billion.

"I have moved into his investment out-

(US) administration introduces unusual levels of unpredictability and uncertainty." "Nobody should sit there and assume that that's what's going to happen." Yet he feels President Trump, who views things "transactionally," is at heart pro-business and growth.

Asked if the US role in the world is the last 80 years as generosity spurred by enlightened self-interest. He (Trump) probably thinks in some ways the US has been a sucker subsidising the rest of the world, but he says he is not generous or not generous enough."

Citing a recent article that likened Trump's policies with a machete, not a scalpel, Marks emphasised that he prefers things "getting done without too much collateral damage".

"From the S&P you're not going to get the historic return of 10% a year for the next decade. You will get something less and if that's true, then the returns described from credit are quite competitive and dependable."

High yield bonds are at 7%... private credit at 9-11%," he said. "These are very good absolute returns and competitive with equities earned contractually and

He remains optimistic about the demographic dividend from 1.4 billion Indians, but cautioned, "A lot will always depend on leadership. I think India will have a re-sing GDP per capita, and that's a very good formula for future growth. But if you have 1.4 billion people, where the top 0.1 billion people do great, you're also doing great for the other 1.3 billion, I hope India will."

His greatest worry about the global economy is politics. "If the US withdraws from the leadership role, does China fill the vacuum?" he said. "The other thing to worry about is demographics because of the declining birth rate and there are major countries which have declining populations. The immigration policy worldwide is a challenge, and a source of demographics."
